had a dispute with his wife. At 60 clock resterday morning he got up and left the house without eating breakfast. As he closed the door he told his wife that she would never see him alive again.

About 0:15 Brauer relieved the night watchman at the bank and went into the building, locking the door behind him. The clerks, who came a little before it o'clock, found the door locked, and after knocking for several minutes decided to break it in. Just inside is a closet used by Brauer as a receptacle for his brooms and brushes. The closet door was closed, but one of the clerks saw a tiny stream of blood running from under it. Suspecting what had occurred, he called a policeman.

When the closet door was broken open Brauer was found lying dead in a corner, with a builet hole through the side of his head. A 44-calibre revolver belonging to the bank lay near the dead man.

John Campbell Hamilton Gordon, the sev-John Campbell Hamilton Gordon, the seventh Earl of Aberdeen, was born in 1847. He was educated at University College, Oxford, and succeeded to the title on the death of his brother in 1870. Entering the House of Lorda as a Conservative it was not long before he dissented from some of the principal measures of his party. By 1880 he had become a recognized member of the Liberal party. In 1880 Mr. Gladstone appointed him Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, with the mission of carrying out the home rule policy of the Government. He was immensely popular in Ireland, and when the people took leave of him after the fall of the Gindstone Cabinet the scene in Dublin is said to have surpassed anything of the kind ever witnessed there since the departure of Lord Fitzwilliam in 1705.

Lord Aberdeen is a member of many religious and bilanthropic societies, and he contributed $5,000 toward Gen. Booth's soliems for alleviating distress.

In 1877 he married the youngest daughter of Lord Tweedmouth. They have had five children, four of whom are living.

The Countess of Aberdeen is prominently known for her connection with philanthropic enterprises. She has been particularly interested in the opening of channels for the employment of women in Ireland. She was the prime mover and organizer in getting up, the Irish village and the fine exhibition of Irish women's handlwork which have just been successfully opened at the World's Fair at Chicago. She is in that city at present in the Interest of those exhibits. LORD ABERDEEN.

the plaintiffs in this case are prepared so to demonstrate. It is understood that the damages

WAS IT PALLISTER'S BODY ?

Search Fatts to Find the Dead Man Capt,

SING SING, May 11. - When the steamer Black. which runs from this place to Haverstraw. Rockland, and Nyack, reached her dock here to-day shortly before noon, her Captain, Frederick S. Jenks, reported having seen at 11:20 o'clock a body floating face up in the river a mile and a quarter below Faverstraw and 1000 yards off the shore. He said he was sitting in the pilot house, when suddenly he saw the white face of a dead man, who had evidently been in the water some time, floating on his back about six feet away from the steamer on the left-hand side. Capt. Jenks did not stop his boat because he had several women and a number of children on board. He also thought that if he tried to tow it the body would be pulled to pleces. He described the dead man as having black hair and what appeared to be a new growth of moustache.

Coroner James Atkerson of Rockland county on being notified of Capt. Jenks's discovery on being notified of Capt. Jenks's discovery searched the river with six rowbeats for six hours. The only thing they found was a mass of driftwood and stumps which the spring freshest brought down the stream.

On his arrival here Capt. Jenks notified State Detective Jackson and the prison authorities of what he had seen. Detective Jackson and some keepers started off at noon in the steam leunch Syall. They cruised over the Tappan Zee for five and a half hours, but found no traces of any body. Detective Jackson said to-night that he thought Capt. Jenks was mistiken in thinking he saw one. "Neman's body floats face up," he said.

Agent Gustav Schwab of the North German Lloyd line said that the three small-pox patients had come from a German colony near Odessa. The company has decided to shut off all immigrants from the Odessa district at once. Mr. Schwab says there is no small-pox in Bromen. The man who developed the disease on the Gera, which arrived on Tuesday, was also from Russia.

Health Officer Jenkins sent a despatch to Surgeon-General Wyman informing him that the Lahn's steerage passengers had been under inspection in a lodging house in Bromen instructions to fumigate the house before any more of its occupants were permitted to depart for the United States.

Three of the crew of the British steamship Etherly, which arrived yesterday from Brazilian ports, died of yellow fever in the hospital at Rio Janeiro last month. LYLLIAN POOLE'S ASHES.

w. D. Daly, who had been Jones-Atwell's counsel, said that Mrs. Hamilton had told him that she knew Jones-Atwell was a married man when she married him, and that her uncle, Mr. Wardell, had told her a man could have a wife in New York although he had another in New Jersey. She had demanded $10,000 to settle the case, but had reduced the claim to $1,500, which Mr. Daly advised Jones-Atwell not to pay. Dr. Hainsford Reads the Episcopal Burial

$10.000 to settle the case, but had reduced the claim to $1.500, which Mr. Daly advised Jones-Atwell not to pay.

Ex-Senator W. S. Stuhr of New Jersey corroborated Mr. Daly, as he was present at the conference with Mrs. Hamilton. The conference was married. He had tried to sottle her claim. The best offer he could get was $750, which she refused. She said he was in league with Jones-Atwell, and she engaged other lawyers.

A petition asking for elemency was presented with about 200 names of residents of Hotoken, including Mayor Lawrence Fagan. City Clerk Dermott, Comptroller F. Kaufmann. Justice of the Peace George T. Seymour, and F. L. Lawrty, Secretary of the Board of Health. Henry W. Jordan of 1.132 Bloomfield street wrote that his wife was undergoing a critical operation at the hands of Dr. Atwell, and that there were many other of his patients who would suffer if he were taken away.

Dr. Atwell made afficiavit that he, as Mr. Jones, married Mrs. Hamilton because she said that, in view of anonymous letters, declaring that she had undergone an unlawful operation at his hands, her people would cast her out. A marriage certificate, she said, would pacify them, and she would trouble him no more. In St. George's Episcopal Church on Stuyvesant square yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock were held the funeral services over the remains of Miss Lyllian Poole, the actress, of the Jarbeau Comedy Company, who died in Pittsburgh on April 20, and whose body was cremated in that city. This is probably the first time that such services have been held in any church in New York, and quite a crowd gathered at St. George's Church to witness the novel ceremony. The Episcopal burial service was read by Dr. Rainsford. The church was tastily decorated about the chancel with Easter liller and lilles of the val-ley. The ashes of the dead woman were in a

ley. The ashes of the dead woman were in a metallic urn, which was encased in a cedar box covered with white cloth. The box was 8 inches square and 11 inches high. It rested on a handsome white pedestal at the head of the middle alists. Above it was a silver basket filled with lilles of the valley.

Banked about the foot of the pedestal were large numbers of lilles of the valley sent by prominent theatrical people. Two photographs of Miss Poole were attached to the box containing the ashes. One was taken in street costume, and the other represented her as Priscilla.

As Dr. Rainsford read the words "earth to Assistant District Attorney Townsend compared Jones-Atwell to Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. SALVATION ARMY HOME OF REST. Two Sides to a Controversy Metween Old Couple and the Army Officers.

DERRY, N. H., May 11 .- In January last Steward Magoon, who is 72 years old, became deeply interested in the work of the Salvation Army, and to show his zeal surrendered his nome to the officers of the Army as a "Home of Rest," where they might recuperate from hard work or illness. The terms of the offer as agreed to between Farmer Magoon and Major Brewer of Boston on the part of the Army, were that the officers should have everything upon the farm at their disposal, in-cluding the products. They in return were to provide food for Mr. and Mrs. Magoon, to help about the place, and also to pay the taxes upon the property. The offer was readily accepted by Major Brewer, and steps were soon taken to establish the home. A lease was drawn up, but the Magoons say they never signed it

It was not long before the officers began to arrive. Major Brewer and wife and children came, and so did other officers of the Army. The agreement had been that the Salvation Army should provide help for both the farm and the house, to work under the directions of Mr. and Mrs. Magoon. The man to work upon the farm did come, but the Magoons say the help to assist about the house never ap-

Major Brewer thinks that the Sairation Army officers are the aggrieved persons in the controversy.

It was adjourned, however, at the request of counsel on each side, and no date was fixed for its resumption. It is rumored that the case may be discontinued altogether and some satisfactory agreement reached out of court by the litigants. The chief point in the defence is that by his own action Col. Sinn has disqualified himself from asking the courts for relief. When his former, wife obtained an absolute divorce he was prohibited by the judgment from remarrying during her litetime. By marrying Miss Tanner, however, he set that judgment at deliance. Col. Sinn's marriage to Miss Tanner took place in a Westmarriage to Mi time it was performed, was to have been con-
